DEMOCRATS WHO REPUDIATE THE PARTY FAITH.

It is somewhat the Republican vogue at present to assert that Democratic mbers of the House-a material and voted with the Republicans upon questions of well-defined party poliles. In a measure, the charge is well founded. Upon the House rules, 23

Yet it is a fact that the present duty on hides has benefitted only the Beef That which fixes the market prices of cattle at its arbitrary will.

These three classes of Democrats are sed of very nearly the same They represent certain special interests in their districts, not the s of their party. The Democratic party at large favore-free raw insterials and antagonizes Cannonism.

It has members who refule to repudiate the party faith upon the tariff question. So long ago as 1832, when Mr. Bryan was a member of the House and the question of a tariff duty on beet sugar was under consideration,

Grain Broker Patten of Chicago, who managed the corner in May wheat and by this means increased the price of ur to consumers, has returned from a vacation and is said to be again manipulating the wheat market. In this he is aided somewhat by a reported shortage in European crops. It is gravely to be regretted that a means of lessening the pernicious activities of such men has not yet been found.

Measures to so amend the Hepburn act as to bring its commodities clause into accord with the Supreme Court decision, have already been introduc-ed in Congress. Before becoming a member of the Taft Cabinet, Mr. MacVeagh was at the head of a large wholesale grocery house in Chicago, and it is quite possible that, before Dr. Wiley began his campaign against alleged poisonous preservatives, Mr. MacVeagh's nouse may have handled, as did other nouses, more or less food stuffs upon which Dr. Wiley has since placed the taboo."

Mme. Schumann Heink, probably the greatest grand opera contracto, who is the mother of eight children and the grandmother of five, arrived from Europe, Thursday, to stay until the Fall of 1910, spending the interim in concert and festival singing, having retired from grand opera. She says: "Talk about art and domestic life being antagonistic. Don't you think I have mingled art and motherhood well?" Mme. Schuman Heink is a wonderful woman, not only in her voice but also in her happy intermingling of "art and mothehood." And it may be said that thus far a successor of equal ability has not yet appeared in grand

It is not difficult to recall a time when the N. Y. Sun favored protection to the limit. Now, the Sun indulges in such sarcasm at the expense of protectionists, as the following:

If the cotton and woolen schedules are not made by the cotton and wool-en manufacturers, with the aid of a corps of adepts and expert mystifiers. they are certainly made for them, and for nobody else. The same must be true of other schedules. The few get the protection. The many pay for it.
The Republicans have the votes in embers of the House—a material spite of Western defection, to put imber of them—have broken away through the kind of tariff they want; from party traditions and platforms and we accept it in advance as satisfactory to the unselfish souls who will profit by it, and to the toiling masses for whose happiness it is being built.

Since then the published ac-counts of what he said have attract-ed wide attention and there has been a lively call for the papers contain-ing briefs of his discourse. It does seem as if outside help should not be called in to close up saloons which hold the law in contempt. A priest of the Catholic church occupies an independent position and can speak in favor of good order and without fear or favor from anybody. There comes a time in many towns when some such plain speaking is needed. Probably Stratford is as law abiding as any town in Connecticut, but un-fortunately it lies close to a big city. and it contains some resorts which are not altogether above suspicion. From time to time many complaints have been made regarding the loud talking and other noises made in the vicinity of Hard's corner, late at night, when city visitors are waiting for a trolley having been spending the evening at But this is the least of the local evils.

No one is surprised to hear that Mr. Dorman has had city water connected with his house for he is a pronounced cold water man.
